Approved For Release 2000/08/08 : CIA-RDP96-00789R001700490004-7

SG1J

[redacted]

5 NOV 86

SITE; HUGE PARABOLIC DISH in SF AREA

very confusing, complex structure consisting of thousands of angles producing a bowl-like shape. In the center of this bowl is a huge pyramid-like structure. This site appeared to be set in the center of a depression with a body of water nearby. The structure portion felt rough, but smooth at the same time. Colors associated with the structure were blues grays, etc. Surrounding area was brown, yellows, earthtones Feeling associated with this site were tingling and vibrations. No sounds or smells were associated with this site.

The major gestalt of the site was a curving bowl. However, the elements that made up the gestalt were all geometric and angular. This is what made it so difficult to decode.

Approved For Release 2000/08/08 : CIA-RDP96-00789R001700490004-7